New High School.

THE public school system of New Albany was organized on May 18th, 1822. From this date to August 18th, 1853, the community was without High School facilities of any kind. On August 18th, 1853, the Board provided for the establishment of a separate and distinct High School. This school was placed at the intersection of West First and Spring streets and denominated "Scribner High School." Four separate and distinct buildings have up to this time been occupied for High School purposes: the present Colored High School building at the intersection of West First and Spring; the old High School building at the intersection of Bank and Spring on the site now occupied by the Carnegie Library building; the home of former Governor Willard, known as the Frisbie property, at the intersection of East Sixth and Spring, on the site where the new High School is being erected; and the building now occupied by the High School at the intersection of East Ninth and Main streets, commonly known as DePauw College.

On the first day of July, 1903, the present School Board began the erection of a new High School, modern in every respect. This building is located at the intersection of East Sixth and Spring streets. Its site extends 160 feet east and west on Spring street and to a depth of 220 feet along the west side of East Sixth street. The front elevation, a cut of which appears on the opposite page, extends east to west, fronting on Spring street a distance of 141 feet, its greatest depth north and south being 137 feet.

The new High School contains in all 8 halls and 33 rooms, distributed as follows:—office rooms, 4; recitation and class rooms, 16; toilet rooms, 7; lunch rooms, 2. A gymnasium 74 x 40 is located in the basement at the north end of the building and is to be equipped with the best appliances for the training of the girls and boys in the proper kind of physical culture for school children. At the north end of the building on the second floor, an auditorium 74½ x 62 ft. is located. This auditorium is to be a joint study or assembly room and a public auditorium. It is estimated that this auditorium will seat 1000 people.

A separate boiler house 50 x 25 is located on the northwest corner of the lot. This building is equipped with two double batteries of Haxum boilers. The High School itself is to be heated by air passing over steam coils in the basement and drawn through the rooms and out of the attic by an electric fan located at the top of the building. The heating specifications are similar to those approved by the Massachusetts Board of Police.

Many new and important branches of study which the school system was not able to offer in crowded quarters will be given in the new High School. Special courses in commercial and manual training will be introduced. It is probable that cooking, sewing, house-keeping, millinery, and other helpful manual work for girls will be introduced.

The building is equipped with every possible convenience and the interior fittings will be equal in appearance and stability to any High School in the State. New Albany will have a High School building of which she need never be ashamed.

It is to be regretted that the outgoing senior class will not have the benefit of these improved school facilities. They may remember with pride that they graduate in the transition year and be glad that those who follow them as High School students are to receive the advantages offered in the new building.

New Public Library.

THE New Albany Public Library was organized May 8th, 1884, under an Act of the Legislature approved on March 5th, 1883.

Until January, 1904, the Library occupied rented quarters. In that month, it was moved into a magnificent building at the intersection of Bank and Spring streets, a cut of which appears on the opposite page. This building was the gift of the Hon. Andrew Carnegie, who contributed $35,000 for its construction, and $5,000 for the proper equipment of the building in book stacks and furniture.

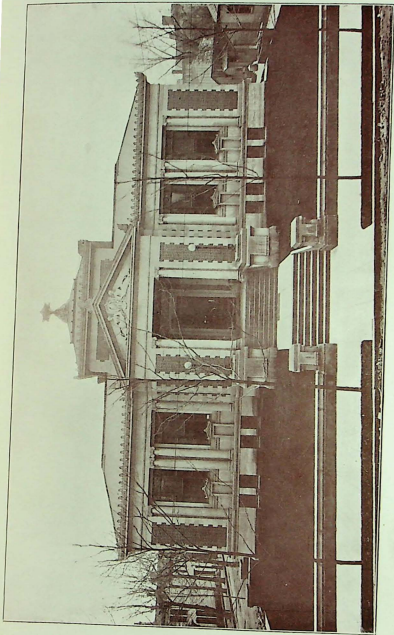

The Carnegie Library is especially adapted to all modern improvements in library work. It contains a reading room 31 x 22 feet, in which are kept about fifteen daily papers and thirty magazines, all of which are of free access to the public.

The children's department is a room 31 x 22 feet, in which are kept constantly on file magazines and newspapers and all popular books of a juvenile nature. At the north end of the main floor, there is a stack room equipped with metal stacks and having a shelving capacity of over 75,000 books. The building also has a public hall 50 x 31 feet, with a capacity of 210 chairs, which is used for educational purposes. The main building is 90 feet x 78 feet.

The officers of the Public Library are President, Louis Hartman; Secretary, William Rady; Treasurer, George Borgerding; Librarian, Walter G. Harrison; Assistant Librarians, supernumeraries from the public schools, who are, at the present time, Miss Margaret Lamman, Miss Mayme Scribner, Miss Ida Lindemann, Miss Eleanor Starr and Miss Alice Green. The purchasing of books is in the hands of a committee composed of the following members: Dr. J. W. Duncan, Chairman; Miss Delia Woodruff, Secretary; Mrs. L. R. Stoy, Mrs. Jas. Dunbar, S. E. Simonson, Dr. R. W. Harris, Edward Fitzpatrick, Chas. Needham, Geo. A. Briscoe.

The Library was recently re-catalogued under the Dewey classification, which with the open shelf system, has proven very satisfactory. The number of card holders now using the Library is 2,103. The number of books in the Library is 11,125. 325 of these are in the Government room and 1,200 books are in the children's department. The Library is open from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. every day except Sunday.

Class Poem.

VALE.

To the Class of 1900=1904.

Farewell, dear comrades, may your days be fair,
And underneath bright skies your lots be cast;
May happy fortune follow everywhere
Your choice's lead; oft may your thoughts repair
To those young hopeful years that marked your past.

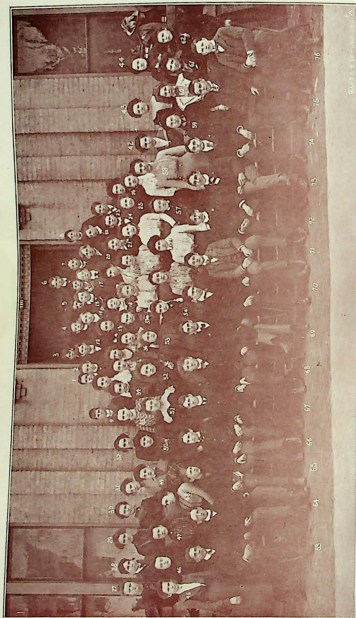

Our course was but the ordinary round
Of earnest effort, but the trying made
The total spell Success, and therein found
Its purpose well accomplished, nobly crowned,
And, what is more, in fullest measure paid.

We loitered in the pleasant places long,
Where pageantry of History disclosed
The storied lore we treasure in the song,
As Homer sung, of Menelaus' wrong,
How Troja's fate in Helen's hand reposed.

The plodding millions that have gone before
A heritage of vantage and of power
Have given us, in seeming ample store—
Thus sped we on, till full fruition bore
The ripened knowledge in our final hour.

With all who hitherto have passed, we link
In benison to all who come behind;
May, in his day of triumph, each one think
Of worthy action just beyond the brink,
For Earth hath needs for men of able mind.

—ROBERT E. DUNDON.

FRESHMAN CLASS OF 1900.

Class History.

IN the year 1900, on a bright morning in September, representatives of every Eighth Grade within the city of New Albany, gathered at the High School building to join the ranks of the Freshman Class. Eighty-eight there were of these, all happy, and seemingly anxious to take up their more advanced work. Owing to many causes, as, indifference, recklessness, indolence, or the more worthy causes, sickness, removal from the city, or an eagerness to begin life's work in the busy world, only thirty-three of this number can claim the faithful Senior's reward—A High School Diploma.

Our entrance into High School marks also the beginning of the work of our Superintendent, Mr. C. A. Prosser, and two of our faithful teachers, Messrs. Edwin Kahl, and Earl C. Walker.

The Sophomore title was bestowed upon us before we felt deserving of the honor, but soon, however, we assumed that real dignity, so characteristic of the sophomore. During this year there was a great deal of talk of a new High School building, and the Sophomore boys, incited by athletic experience of the previous year, submitted a petition to the School Board for a gymnasium in the new school, and their request was kindly granted to the petitioners.

When the '02 term called us to our studies, and Caesar sounded his trumpet to follow him through Gaul, and to the conquest of the Germans; when quadratics were to show their marks upon our troubled brows, we were in different quarters—the Frisbie mansion temporarily converted into a school house. The old High School building had been removed and in its place, in course of erection, was our present handsome Public Library.

Toward the close of the year, Prof. Funk, through failing health, was unable to perform his duties as principal and instructor of Mathematics, and his resignation, which was tendered later, caused great regret in the hearts of those who had ever found in him a kind and faithful teacher.

As our fourth and last year approached, when we were first to picture ourselves in an audience of senators, then in one of humble plebeians, to hear the orator Cicero condemn and finally convict the miserable Cataline, we were again to witness a few changes. In the faculty were two new teachers, Prof. H. A. Buerk, and Mr. George Kahl, who filled the vacancies caused by the resignation of Prof. J. P. Funk, and Mr. E. C. Walker. The contract for the erection of a new High School building had been let and had ground broken before the opening of the schools for the year 1903. Being without any quarters for our school, the Board was compelled to seek them in DePauw College, where some of us may probably end our school days.

Though disappointed in not having been able to enjoy the many advantages of the new building, still I think we shall all gladly recall our High School days, and say of them, "These were indeed happy days."

—RAY BIZOT.

The Class Prophecy.

THIS Class of 1904 is approaching that metaphorical stream called the River of Life. Soon it will plunge in, and each member be battling with its waves. Its eddies, waves and currents seize the swimmers. Driven far apart, they pursue their destined courses alone.

Wrecks along the shore, hesitating souls caught in eddies, strong men and women battling and buffeting opposing waves of adversity, happy souls floating in smooth and favoring currents, are swept at once beyond the reach of helping hands. All must be hurried on to the vast ocean of eternity.

To the instructor who has led the class to the water's edge, the scene is one of serious and even sad contemplation. In the quiet of his study, their young faces come thronging to his thoughts, and thus he reads their destiny.

I see the girls ten years hence, the light and life of many households; many matrons presiding over happy homes, and a few noble self-sacrificing girls, the stay and comfort of parents in their declining years.

Berla Scott and Martha Poucher will wed ministers; though their lives will be marked by the many cares of preachers' wives, they will likewise be filled with many good deeds of charity and love.

Eva Beaucond and Lily Nunemacher will teach for a time, but soon the educational world will meet with an irreparable loss—they will resign their positions and marry.

Effie Rowe and May Williamson will be the first to wed: both will marry business men; both will be devoted wives, obedient to their husbands in all things.

Betty Long will be the last to wed: her husband will be a large, good-tempered man, a farmer by occupation, and though Betty's stature is low, she has a strong will, and she will rule Mr. Farmer with a rod of iron.

The two Jennies, though so much alike as students, will pursue widely different courses. Jennie Koch will take a business course, serve an apprenticeship, embark a small capital in business, become a shrewd business woman, make money rapidly by her tact and knowledge of humanity; but her generous nature will spend as rapidly as her business talent will accumulate. She will live well, and spoil her husband by kindness. Jennie Strickland will spend another year in study, then marry. She will fill her home with sunshine, and her merry laughter which has often beguiled me into restoring 1% offs, will prove equally efficacious in the management of her associates.

Stella Borgerding will marry a professional man, possibly an M. D.; she will be very domestic, keep a nice home, be in demand at entertainments by reason of her musical talents, and advance her husband's fortunes by shrewd and tactful assistance.

Mabel Kraft and Elizabeth Tether will take a business course and practice their profession, but will not embark in business. They will soon tire of the routine of clerical duties and listen more favorably to marriage proposals. They will finally marry, either members of the firm, or associate employees.

The military portion of this community has had great attraction for Irma Korb. It is therefore very possible that brass buttons or Khaki uniforms will be frequently seen in her vicinity, or she will be seen in their vicinity, just as you please.

Nannie Hess, Lola Martin, Ethel Relling and Edna Rowe will lead quiet peaceful lives in their parents' homes. They will be in no haste to marry, though they will receive numerous suitors. Two will not be able to make a choice, and the other two will marry, but after several years have elapsed.

Myrtle Weddle and Mamie Hennig will be chums after graduation. They will have ambitious yearnings to be prominent factors in life's battles, but the former will wed a professional man, and the latter, either a business man or a skilled mechanic.

Lena Hurrell will study a profession after a series of years, and become a physician of some prominence.

Ray Bizot will in time study medicine, but having a taste, and possibly, a talent, for political enterprises, he will combine business with pleasure, by securing his election to an office which requires a knowledge of medicine and surgery on the part of the occupant.

William Coolman may have many ideas of professional work for the future, but the army will claim him as its own, and although a civilian at first, the Government will use his talents to such an extent, that "Col. Coolman" is a future possibility.

Robert Dundon, whose command of the "well of English undefiled" is well known, is fated to be a journalist. He will always be a just and broad minded editor. His editorials will have great literary merit, but will not be polemical. For a similar reason he will not confine his efforts to the newspapers, but will attempt the higher fields of literary work, and write books.

Charles Tighe is fated to be a lawyer. Having a strong instinct for politics, he will soon aspire to political office, but, listening to the advice of friends, he will use this office only as an adjunct to his profession. He will run for Congress, not for the salary he would receive if elected, but for honor and the good he could do. The Hon. Chas. Tighe may be heard from some day.

Cook Greene will be a scientist in the field of Botany or Geology. He will teach these subjects in some university, and while thus employed will write several books and pamphlets, which will be noted for painstaking accuracy.

James Nicholson will not have the patience to undergo the long course of toil and expenditures incident to professional preparation. The occupation which shows him a dollar to be honestly earned, full in view, will win his pursuit. He will become a man of affairs, choosing that line which involves rapid gains or losses, and involves financial risks in its management. He will be a rich man.

William Kintner, after a course in medicine in Louisville, will spend several years in London, fitting himself as a specialist. He will practice in America. At fifty, having laid by a competency, he will retire to a farm. His occupation will then be that of a gentleman farmer; his pleasure will consist in curing the sick indigents of his neighborhood.

Leon Gohman will take additional work in Chemistry and Mineralogy and Physics, so that when he enters a certain firm of manufacturers, he will bring new and modern ideas to the firm, and give it a new lease of life in the present day competitive struggle for trade.

Elmer Foust will become a civil engineer. In place of working for a salary, he will embark his first earnings in the contracting line, and do a conservative successful business.

Fred Beck will hesitate for some time, but will finally take a course in Chemistry and Mineralogy, at some school like Rose Polytechnic. He will become an assayer, invest his earnings in mining properties, and win a competency.

Carl Sehan will attend college, possibly Wabash or Hanover. He will secure a good classical education, but his livelihood will be obtained in mercantile pursuits, probably the sale of manufactured articles.

Prentice Hans will become an electric engineer. As a student he will be a quiet, painstaking, hard working student. When graduated, he will at first take an humble position with some electric supply manufacturing company, but, soon learning the practical details, he will go to South America. Returning to the States at middle age, he will spend his active life as a superintendent of a city system of electric lighting.

Carl Crawford will study Electric Engineering until he finds it not to his taste, when he will turn his attention to Chemistry. He will become a manufacturing chemist, and, owing to a considerable business talent, will make a success and a fortune.

FRESHMAN 1903-1907.

Second Annual High School Opera.

"The Little Duke."

By Lecocq.

EARLY in the fall of 1902, the Senior Class of the High School presented a petition signed by a large number of the pupils, asking that an opera be given that term. The result was the presentation of the "Chimes of Normandy" in a very creditable manner, and, owing to the interest in music it aroused, it was deemed advisable to make an annual feature of the opera work.

This year "Erminie" was first selected, but, as a royalty would have had to be paid, it was dropped, and the "Little Duke" was taken up at once. The latter proved very satisfactory, as the opera is one admirably adapted to school presentation, most of the characters being really juvenile, the music tuneful, and comedy abundant.

The cast was a good one throughout, and numbered thirty-three, the principals being Miss Julia Greenwood as the LITTLE DUCHESS, Miss Jene Koch as CHANOINESSE, Miss Stella Borgerding as GOVERNESS, Mr. Wilbert Embs as LITTLE DUKE, Anton Embs as FRIMOUSSE, Charles Stephenson as DE MONTA-LAND. The minor parts were taken by Messrs. Carl Crawford, Ed. Grubbs, Percy Pierson, Roy Scott, William Coolman; Misses Violet Miller, Ruth Rough, Cloe Euton, Grace Enos, Irma Korb, Estelle McBride. As Maids of Honor were Misses Zuerschmeide, Starr, Shrader, Rough, Davis, King, Biel, Lyons. Pages, Messrs. Spalding, Thomas, Hartman, Dash, Kurfess, Neat, Hurst, Starr. In the Chorus were eighty-eight. The Orchestra comprised thirteen instruments and piano, the pianist being Miss Ethel Jackson.

The work of Cast, Chorus, and Orchestra, was excellent, the Chorus particularly doing well at all times. The attendance at the two night performances was very good, and the matinee audience was a record-breaker for amateur performances in the New Albany Opera House.

The satisfactory results attained are due, primarily, to the capable direction and good offices of Prof. David R. Gebhart, who always takes the initiative in anything beneficial to musical advance in the schools. A vote of thanks should be given to Messrs. Anton and Wilbert Embs, Robert Beers, Herbert Kenney, Charles Stephenson, and Miss Ethel Jackson, for their assistance in making the performance a success; also to Mrs. J. F. Gebhart and Mrs. Kate Wade, who planned the costuming of the second act.

Opposite this page is a scene of the Cast and Chorus of the "Little Duke," taken, by flash light, in the Opera House.

High School Athletics.

AT present, athletics is a live issue with our students. The naturally vigorous boy or girl, seeking recreation in leisure hours, may profitably turn to out-of-door sports, of which there is an almost endless variety. Professor Earl Walker in former years, and Professor H. A. Buerk later, have given much attention to the development of the High School spirit, as manifested on the athletic field.

In foot-ball we have made excellent progress. The eleven of 1902 lost but one game, and that to the heavy Borden College players. Upon the arrival of Professor Buerk, the 1903 team was organized, with J. B. Williamson captain. Below is a list of the various contests in which we have engaged.

Charlestown H. S., 5; N. A. H. S., 0.
N. A. Business College, 0; N. A. H. S., 11.
Salem, 27; N. A. H. S., 0.
N. A. Business College, 0; N. A. H. S., 11.

Corydon H. S., 0; N. A. H. S., 20.

Corydon H. S., 5; N. A. H. S., 10.

Much difficulty has been encountered in creating interest in the track team, as the rigorous and systematic training necessary to attain success debars many. Last year we lost the meet with the Business College, which was represented by a number of crack athletes, among them, graduates of High Schools. Individuals captured a number of medals, while the "outfit" bore away a Silver Loving Cup as a trophy of their skill. We anticipate good track work this year.

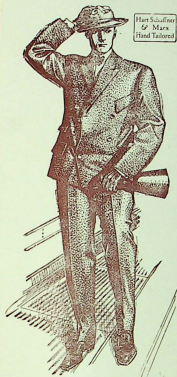

The past winter afforded the basketball devotees an opportunity which they eagerly seized. Both boys and girls had several formidable aggregations, and the impetus given to this sport will be felt next season.

The purchase and installation of four light barges, mainly through the efforts of Professor Buerk, are much appreciated. Rowing crews have been selected, and a regatta will be held this summer on the river. Great rivalry between the four classes has developed, and the superiority of any contestant will be decided only on the basis of endurance and speed.

The five islands of Japan are Coca-Cola, Malta-Vita, Taffy-Tolu, Sen-Sen, and Egg-O-Sec.

Mr. W. K. has discovered that a hollow sphere cannot be made to exactly fit inside of a cone. We recommend that he try adapting a sorrel mop to the inner surface of a scrub-water bucket.

Miss Fawcett—"Couldn't some one suggest a better word—a shorter, simpler one?" Bob (of Boston)—"Why not use unsophisticated?"

Prentice H. and the Senior boat had a falling-out.

The bill was about to pass by a vote of 67 ayes to 1 negative, when Mr. Bizot came in and saved the day by voting with the nose.

"There be more things in heaven and earth, O Rachel, than are dreamt of in thy philosophy."

Senior Orator (declaiming with appropriate gestures)—"It was a fine day for the celebration. The clouds were clear—" and then he wondered why they gave him the equine giggle.

Flunko, flunkere, suspendi expulsus

At the Senior Trial.

Prosecutor Coolman (to Witness Hess)—"Are you single or married?" Attorney Bizot (quickly)—"I object, your Honor."

Miss Fawcett (reading question)—"In what work did Shelley show his devotion to liberty?"

Crawford (with the solemnity becoming a Senior)—"Promiscuous unbound."

We hear that there is talk of repeating the "Little Duke." Why not? Shall we, whose forefathers fought and fled for liberty, take a "defi?" No! Never! Better far to face the flying shells of an enraged and hostile audience, than thus ignominiously retreat into obscure oblivion.

A Geometrical Fumble.

Once upon a time, Gene Ratrix escaped from her watchful directrix, and met Corol Lary at a fixed point. Now Gene's folks would not have considered Corol to be in the same plane with her, but he made many complementary remarks, so, when their paths intersected, their two lives became similar and homologous, and, despite the fact that their son Triangle lacked arms, and one of his legs was bisected by the revolution of a circle, and that at the same time Corol often diverged by a rather obtuse angle from the geometrically straight and narrow way, he coming home of nights, after including a number of "Elevated Spheres," describing most unseemly hyperbolas and parabolas, nevertheless they lived long and happily until "just as their parallel life lines entered infinity." Such is life.

Finale.

At last, old class mates, staunch and true,
The time has come to bid adieu;
Though wand'ring through this world apart,
May memory bind us heart to heart.
Yet, lest on earth we meet no more,
Farewell, old friends of 1904.
